Write Your Value Proposition

- Customer Persona: Alex

- Value Proposition: For college students who want their giving to matter, charity: water makes it fast, easy, and secure to donate—no matter how small, every dollar counts—turning your gift into clean, safe water for drinking, cooking, and bathing for families currently relying on dirty sources. We then prove the impact with clear project updates, photos, and stories showing exactly where your money went, which community it served, and the hours freed up for kids' school and adults' work.

Headline: Turn spare change into clean water

Subheadline: Your fast, hassle free, secure donation to charity: water become safe water for families- every dollar counts- proven with clear impact updates that show exactly where your money goes and the lives it transforms.

Brand Visuals – Color Palette & Typography (Font)

The yellow, black and white colors were the colors I used on my landing page. The yellow is warm, cheerful, and optimistic. The black shows authority, boldness, and is professional. The white shows purity, cleanliness, and simplicity.

I chose these images for my landing page because I want to show potential donors the difference in what people currently rely on as a water source and the change that every dollar donated can help us provide for these families.

I recently completed a landing page as part of my Global Career Accelerator Program. The experience was educational, particularly in understanding branding, color psychology, and the effective use of specific colors and images.

The landing page I created was for a charity that deeply resonated with me, motivating me to invest extra time and effort to ensure it would touch others' hearts as it did mine.

One of my biggest challenges was shifting my focus from the big picture to concentrating on one element at a time until everything came together as I envisioned. Additionally, being encouraged to use AI proved beneficial, allowing me to bounce ideas around while maintaining the integrity of my message.
